Her appointment was effective June 1.

NAQC is a strategic and collaborative effort among the nation’s most prestigious nursing organizations, consumer groups and other stakeholders to bring a unified voice to the profession of nursing and strengthen its ability to influence quality-related health reform agendas. “As executive director, Dr. Hahn will bring a wealth of collaborative expertise and experience to this initiative,” said Ellen Dawson, Ph.D., A.N.P., chair of the Department of Nursing.

Dr. Hahn, comes to NAQC from George Mason University where she served as associate professor and assistant dean for the Master's Division in the School of Nursing. In addition to her visionary leadership in fostering the development of a culture of teaching excellence at George Mason University, she has held clinical and administrative positions in a variety of health care arenas to include acute care and community settings.

Dr. Hahn is the recipient of the Virginia Nurses Association Nursing Health Care Public Policy Award (2009) and comes to the project with extensive experience in bringing together nurses to work in an effective and collaborative manner.
